ABYSSINIANS SLAUGHTER ITALIAN SUBJECTS

HEAVY FIGHTING AT OUTPOST

BOMBING PLANES FINALLY DISPERSE TRIBESMEN

OVER SIXTY KILLED IN SOMALILAND

FRONTIER QUARREL

Rome, Dec. 7.

At least sixty Italian subjects have been killed and four hundred others wounded in a fierce outpost engagement fought between Italian Somaliland troops and settlers and a furious army of Abyssinian tribesmen.

According to reports reaching Rome to-day, the attack was directed against the town of Wallualual, and tribesmen pouring down upon it and killing indiscriminately any whom they encountered.

Details of the fight are meagre, but it is believed that while the small and much depleted garrison at Wallualual fought stubbornly against the attacking force which far outnumbered it, messengers were got through to other coast points and relief was immediately despatched.

It is known that two army bombing planes finally assisted in dispersing the Abyssinian raiders.

FORMAL DEMAND

The Italian Government has addressed a formal note to the Abyssinian Government, demanding satisfaction for the attack, the payment of heavy compensation and the punishment of the

BUT LITTLE HOPE LEFT

(Special to "Telegraph")

Honolulu, Dec. 7.

Although there is little hope that Charles Ulm and his two flying companions, lost somewhere near the Hawaiian islands, can still be alive, the British Consulate here has announced that the Australian Government has offered U.S.$5,000 reward for the rescue of the lost party and U.S.$1,000 for discovery of authentic evidence of their fate, such as wreckage of the plane or their bodies.

It is now possible that a fleet of 1,300 commercial vessels from the Islands may be mobilised to augment the search which the United States naval authorities have in hand.

A Navy and Army conference has decided to continue on a reduced scale the search for the missing men "until hope is definitely abandoned." Every day planes spread the area of the sea surface over which they have hunted.—United Press.

TELEGRAMS FOR PASSENGERS

London, Dec. 7.

The Postmaster General announces that arrangements have been made with Imperial Airways, Limited, under which telegrams can be accepted at certain Post Offices for transmission to persons travelling in Imperial Airways aircraft while in the air over sections of the Empire routes between Alexandria and Karachi and between Alexandria and Cairo.

The service, which for the present will be on an experimental basis, will begin on December 10.—British Wireless.

PLAN FOR POLICING SAAR TERRITORY

WORKING OUT DETAIL AT GENEVA

London, Dec. 7.

Arrangements in regard to the Saar International Force were being worked out in Geneva to-day.

The final composition of the force is not yet known, but it is hoped that, in response to the invitation from the League Council, contingents from certain other countries will join those from Britain and Italy.

It is understood that no nomination has yet been made to the command of the International Force, but if it is decided to have a Supreme Command it is assumed that it will be entrusted to a British officer. The convenience of such an arrangement, in view of the fact that the Chairman of the Saar Governing Commission, to which the Force will be immediately responsible, is of British nationality, is obvious. It is pointed out that the project for the despatch of the International Force to the Saar originated with the British Government.

It is now revealed that this method of ensuring maintenance of order in the Saar, which has been received with such general acclaim, had been under consideration of the British Government since it became clear that the French would prefer to stand aside.

Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador in Rome, visited Signor Mussolini to-day and thanked him for Italy's co-operation in the Saar plebiscite arrangements. Appreciation of Italy's action has also been formally expressed to Il Duce by Germany and France.—British Wireless.

Prince Sailing For N.Z.

AUSTRALIA TOUR COMPLETED

London, Dec. 7.

The Duke of Gloucester's visit to Australia will, conclude on Monday, when he is due to sail from Brisbane for New Zealand. He fulfilled his last public duties in Brisbane to-day, including the launch by wireless of the 24,000-ton Orient liner which is under construction at Barrow-in-Furness. The Duke is spending the week-end privately at a coastal station house, where he will have opportunities of swimming and deep sea fishing.

At a Rotary luncheon, where he was the guest to-day, the Duke said he was convinced that whatever divergent opinions Australian people might possess on other subjects, two sentiments were common to all and were so deeply ingrained as to be part of their being, namely affection for the Crown and loyalty to the Empire.—British Wireless.

Church War To Flame Up Again

REBEL PASTORS CALLED TRAITORS

GERMANY'S FREEDOM

(Special to "Telegraph")

The temporary lull in the German Church controversy is apparently about to end.

It is rumoured that the Fighting Pastor, Dr. Niemoller, and the Bishop of Osnabrueck, Dr. Kock, head the list of thirty pastors to be arrested by secret police after the Saar plebiscite.

It is stated that the pastors will be charged with insubordination to Herr Hitler, instigation to rebellion, high treason, and with having connections with the foreign press.

There was an instance of the more firm action against the Church Opposition last night, when a meeting Dr. Niemoller was addressing was broken up by police because he referred to Reichsbishop Mueller.

Another hint of impending action was given by the Minister of the Interior when speaking at Velsbuden to-day, and declaring that the Government was no longer willing to allow intrigues against the state under the guise of Christian interests. The Government, he said, was determined to apply political consequences to this class of "enemies and traitors."—Reuter Special.

EXTENDING AIR SERVICES

Shanghai, Dec. 8.

It is learned on the authority of the Chinese National Aviation Corporation that the Chungking-Yunnanfu air mail service, an extension of the existing air transportation system in the Yangtze Valley, will likely be brought into existence early next year as a new Ford plane which is capable of accommodating ten passengers, is being ordered from the United States and is expected to be delivered to the C.N.A.C. some time in February.—Central News.

STILL HOPE FOR NAVAL AGREEMENT IN LONDON

PITIFUL PLIGHT OF REFUGEES

Steady Exodus From Yugo-Slavia

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1934. Received, December 8, 8.33 a.m.)

Szeged, Dec. 7. Hungarians expelled from Yugo-Slavia continue to arrive here, presenting a pitiful spectacle.

A nervous situation prevails at the frontier town of Roeszke, near Szeged, where only a small ditch separates Yugo-Slavia and Hungary. The ditch is described in the Peace Treaty as a navigable river.

Reuter Special.

Reuter says 2,436 refugees have already arrived in Budapest and many more are awaiting transportation to the frontier. It is believed about 30,000 will be expelled. Hungary has issued a nation-wide appeal for funds and money is pouring in. Archduke Albrecht is accommodating hundreds on his frontier estates.

It is expected the frontier will be closed owing to the growing hostility between the Serbs and the Hungarians.

SIAMESE MISSION TO KING

SEEKS TO PREVENT ABDICATION

PARTY ARRIVES IN LONDON

London, Dec. 7.

The Siamese mission headed by the President of the National Assembly, has arrived in London with the object of attempting to dissuade King Prajadhipok from his threat to abdicate.

The King declares he will surrender all rights to the throne unless the Government withdraw its plan to further curtail the royal prerogative.

It is generally agreed if the King abdicates, Siam will be caught up by troubled times. There is even danger of a revolution. The King's position is unique, in that he holds the firm allegiance of the vast majority of the people. It is this loyalty and love of some millions of subjects which makes so strong the attitude of the monarch in his effort to retain royal rights. It is said.

It is unlikely that the Mission will see the King before December 10. It is thought the members will visit their monarch in his country estate, but it is possible that he may come up to London.—Reuter.

JAPAN'S GREAT RESPONSIBILITY

AMERICAN ATTITUDE SOMEWHAT CLEARER

FURTHER LIGHT UPON REDUCTION PROPOSAL

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1934. Received, Dec. 8, 9.50 a.m.)

London, Dec. 7.

The fate of the naval negotiations in London now rests with Japan. The delegates are waiting for Tokyo's denunciation of the Washington Treaty which, for thirteen years, has been the main instrument of control of the world's naval shipbuilding. Everything depends upon the attitude shown by Japan when she denounces the Treaty.

Mr. Matsudaira, the Japanese Ambassador at London, told Sir John Simon that the Japanese note of denunciation would arrive in London some time next week.

The Ambassador also told Sir John Simon that the denunciation would be accompanied by an exhaustive aide memoire setting out Japan's reasons for taking this serious step and making suggestions for a new system of security to replace that which must go by the board with the old Treaty's termination in 1936.

SOME HOPE STILL

No Extension Of German Ship Service

H.K.-AUSTRALIA PLAN DROPPED

TWO VESSELS SOLD

Berlin, Dec. 7.

The North German-Lloyd steamship company has suddenly abandoned its plan for the inauguration of a China-Australian service.

The extension of the Hongkong-New Guinea service was announced on November 14, the German operators stating that they intended placing four vessels in service. Immediately a storm of protest broke in Australia and New Zealand.

The North German-Lloyd company argued that they were not attempting to thrust into an inter-empire service, explaining that they would be merely providing another link between New Guinea and the farther south.

The two new motorships which were to have commenced running on this extended service on December 31, have now been sold to an Australian concern, the Burns, Philp and Company. Two other vessels will remain on the Hongkong-New Guinea service.—Reuter.

FLAG CHANGED

The two ships which were to have commenced the Hongkong-Australia service are the Neptuno and the Merkur, and it is these which have been sold to the Australian company, it is believed. The Neptuno, however, is reported in Hongkong to have left Melbourne on December 4 on her maiden voyage in the extended service. She is believed to have left Australia as a North German-Lloyd ship, but she will arrive here under another flag.

There is a feeling among the delegates to the naval conversations that all hope should not be abandoned. There is still the possibility that some agreement may be reached when, while satisfying the Japanese, will yet maintain equality of security in the Pacific demanded by the United States. This hope will lead all delegates to examine closely and sympathetically any suggestions which may accompany Japan's denunciation.

From Washington it is learned that the Administration feels that the denunciation of the treaty will mean an end of naval discussions here.

UP TO JAPAN

It is up to Japan to alter this view. It will depend upon the suggestions she puts before the delegates next week whether or not the American view can be modified. It is suggested here that Mr. Norman Davis, when he spoke to the Association of American Correspondents in London yesterday, may have had two reasons for speaking with such finality. Firstly, he wished to inform the American people that their delegates were giving nothing away either to Japan or Britain, and secondly, to inform Japan and Great Britain in unequivocal terms that America still stands firmly behind the Washington Treaty system of security.

DAVIS'S PROPOSAL

It is learned that although Mr. Davis announced that he actually proposed scale reductions for the three great naval Powers, which would preserve the Washington and London Treaty ratios, matter has actually not gone beyond the enunciation of a principle and there is no ground for saying that he proposed a reduction per cent. or any other percentage. Meanwhile, Admiral Stansbury of the American fleet declares that reports that a new building solely for replacement are "nonsense".

Over ten years ago, he America had a number of built or building, but she had built practically and the fleet had become obsolete. The twenty-four ships built in the new program (Continued on Page 2)

FIRE EATS CANADA'S TIMBER

REFORESTATION PROGRAMME

SEEDINGS FOR WORLD

Toronto. Because fire wiped out 230,000,000 cubic feet of standing timber in Canada from 1926-1930, and the amount cut for use was 2,970,000,000 cubic feet in the same period, leaders stress the need for a programme of reforestation.

An example of what is being done to replace the wastage of the country's forests is provided at the Provincial Forest Station at Midhurst Nursery, situated about five miles northwest of Barrie, a two-hour motor run from Toronto. The Midhurst Nursery lies in Simcoe County, one of the largest counties in Ontario.

The pioneers of 80 years ago had to clear the forest in order to till the land, for wood was worth little. Thus it came about that millions of board feet were burned, and even today rail fences of ash and oak can be found in places, worth hundreds of dollars at present values.

When the railways came in 1850, it became possible to ship the timber of Simcoe to markets in Europe. Pine was the timber most in demand, and as it grew on light, sandy soils, many settlers located on land of this sort. Some of the finest red pine of the Dominion was cut here, many trees measuring three feet in diameter on the stump, and white pine as large as four feet.

TALL MASTS

A great deal of this timber was cut for masts and spars for sailing ships. Great quantities were squared for the English market. The sticks used for masts were in lengths up to 118 feet, and it needed 15 teams to haul them to the railway. The centre of the lumber industry was at the village of Angus, with 17 mills within a radius of 10 miles.

When the timber had all been cut for a few years the land produced crops from the nourishment left and in a few years the land was not useful even for pasture. By 1900 most of the farms on the sand plains had been abandoned.

Reforestation in Ontario is handled mainly under "The Counties Reforestation Act" of 1921 by which it is agreed that the county buys a minimum of 1,000 acres while the Provincial Government reforests the tract and maintains it for 80 years under certain conditions.

In the work at Midhurst there are three main steps: collecting the seed, maintaining the nursery and caring for the reforested area.

COLLECTING SEED

Seed is collected for the work of reforestation from the city of Ottawa nearly to the Manitoba boundary. In the autumn of 1932 nearly 3,000 permits to collect seed were granted and more than 40,000 bushels of red pine cones alone were gathered. The centre of all this collecting industry, which gave employment to many persons, was at the village of Angus, on the edge of the Camp Borden plains, near the Midhurst Nursery.

There is located the Ontario Government's seed extracting plant. Most of the cones come by rail, in stock cars, to guard against heating. When the work was at its busiest, there were as many as six cars on the siding at one time.

WORLD SUPPLIED

Some trees bear nuts, like the walnut and hicknuts. The seed of others, like the maples and ashes, is in the form of keys, and

BEAUTY NOTES

Taffeta, with the charming kilted frills which always seem to be associated with it, was used for this simple, but very effective, dance frock. The flowers at the top of the corsage are a new note.

COMPLEXION HINTS

A SIMPLE yet excellent home treatment for the complexion consists of an application of oil of sweet almonds and white of egg. This should be applied every night. Beat the white of an egg, add a teaspoonful of oil of sweet almonds, and beat to a froth. Wipe the face and neck with a piece of cotton-wool dipped in rose-water, d.v., and apply the egg and oil with a clean swab of cotton-wool, dabbing it on with sharp little tappings. It remains till the morning.

Still others have their seed inclosed in a fleshy covering like cherries. These are ready to plant as collected.

This is not the case with the seeds of the evergreen or coniferous trees, which must be put through a long series of processes before they can be used. At the Angus plant, machinery is installed to handle large quantities of these cones, extracting the seeds and cleaning them.

Seed from Angus goes all over the world wherever reforestation is carried on—to the United States, Great Britain, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, Austria, Denmark, Japan and the Union of Soviet Republics.

At the Midhurst Nursery, the progress of the trees from seed to the oldest plantations may be followed. First come the seedlings, sown in the fall, many containing forests of 16,000 trees one inch high, in an area of under 120 square feet. In their first season these little fellows are shaded from the rays of the sun by screens of lath. During dry weather as much as 50,000 gallons of water are sprinkled in a day over the beds.

Seedlings usually stay in the beds two years. They are then "lined out" in rows in transplant beds, where, depending on their species, they are kept for one or two years. Trees in some of the earliest plantations established in 1924 have reached a height of 15 to 20 feet.

Man Has Not Changed In 60 Centuries

CONTENTION OF SCIENTISTS

Baghdad, Dec. 3.

Scientists who are excavating the historic sites of Mesopotamia have just advanced the theory that the inhabitants of Iraq to-day show little facial or bodily difference from the ancestors of Abraham who lived in this country six thousand years ago.

For the past eleven years the once-famous city of Kish has been yielding up its secrets to the excavators of the Field Scientific Expedition conducted by the Field Museum of Natural History and Oxford University. During the excavations numerous skeletons and other remains of the ancient inhabitants of this country were dug up.

The anthropological section of the expedition, under the leadership of Mr. Henry Field of Chicago, has been conducting measurements of the human remains found in the excavations and comparing them with the measurements of the present-day inhabitants of Iraq. In this work Mr. Field has been assisted by an expert zoologist, Mr. Richard Martin, also of Chicago.

More than 2,000 representatives of the modern Iraqis have been examined recently. Among them are such diverse elements as Arab tribesmen, Kurds, Assyrians, Jews and even the strange Yezidis, or devil-worshippers.

Forty anthropological observations have been taken in the case of each man examined. As a result of this work it has been established that in general appearance the average inhabitant of the Tigris and Euphrates valleys has not changed in the course of 6,000 years.

Both King Ghazi of Iraq and the Iraq government have shown the greatest interest in the work conducted by the expedition.—United Press.

NATION OF WINE DRINKERS

MILLIONS OF GALLONS USED IN FRANCE

Paris, Nov. 30.

That the French are still a wine-drinking race despite the growing popularity of beer and that they are able to afford more wine than in recent years is evidenced in the latest official figures of clearance from vineyard cellars.

One billion litres more wine will have been cleared from vineyard owners' stocks at the end of the 1933-34—October to October—season, it is estimated, than for the preceding seasons.

Paris alone by the end of August had consumed 891,256,100 litres—that is to say, 13,160,100 litres more than at the end of August, 1933. The taxed wine consumption for the country at that time was 4,468,012,400 litres, which represented an increase of 22,304,700 litres over the preceding season.

Stocks cleared from vine growers' cellars at the end of August totalled 3,607,799,110 litres, or an increase of 733,930,200 litres over the total for the previous year. Most of this wine went to cellars, whose stocks at the end of August were only slightly in excess of the 1932-33 vintage season, the totals being 4,468,012,400 and 4,373,707,700 litres, respectively.—United Press.

BRITAIN LACKING NAVAL STRENGTH INSUFFICIENT IN EVENT OF ANOTHER WAR

LORD JELlicoe's WORD OF ADVICE

A grave warning to the Empire of the weakness of the Navy in the event of another war is given by Earl Jellicoe in his book, "The Submarine Peril".

Lord Jellicoe discloses how near the Allies, owing to the lack of ships, were to being forced into accepting peace terms before the unrestricted German submarine menace could be dealt with in 1917, and declares that the number of cruisers available for convoy work at the present time "is entirely inadequate."

Aircraft, he states, cannot possibly alone give the necessary protection, even under favourable conditions of weather.

"Our difficulties in 1917," Lord Jellicoe states in an introduction to the book, "were very great. Those that would face a future Board (of Admiralty) would be indeed formidable, unless it is realised that our naval forces are inadequate for the work that may be required of them, and steps are taken to make up our deficiencies."

In the introduction to his new book, Lord Jellicoe issues a grave warning to the British Empire.

"If," he writes, "as seems to be generally conceded, we are to expect indiscriminate bombing of towns, ships, etc., by aircraft, should another war unhappily take place, can we be assured that submarine attacks upon merchant ships are carried out in the late war, will not also be practised by a nation fighting with its back to the wall? Can we be sure that treaty agreements can be relied upon under such conditions?"

CONVOY STRENGTH.

"Certainly the chances of treaty agreements being carried out are far greater if we have the power to enforce their observance. If there is any danger of such attacks in the future, it is essential that the British Empire should be in a position to place mercantile traffic under convoy again."

"Let us consider how our Navy stands should we, in the future, have to re-institute a convoy system."

"In regard to vessels for ocean escort, we supplied in 1918 fifty such vessels and the United States supplied a large number in addition. Some of our vessels were armed merchant ships. We now possess 52 cruisers altogether, of which 14 are over the age limit of sixteen years. A considerable number of these cruisers are of course needed for work with the Battle Fleet. The number left available for convoy work is entirely inadequate.

HEAVY TOLL

"In the early months of the Great War, two German light cruisers which were at large for only ten weeks, captured or sank 40 British and seven neutral merchant ships, although we had 53 British and 18 Allied men-of-war, in addition to 22 armed merchant ships, operating on the trade routes."

"Later in the war two armed raiders (disguised merchant ships) sank or captured 55 British, 10 Allied, and 6 neutral merchant ships."

"It should not be forgotten that we were far more favourably placed geographically to prevent the exit of raiders from German ports than we should be in the case of almost any other nation."

POSITION IN 1917

"In November, 1917, the number of destroyers, sloops and 'P' boats in use for the escort of our Atlantic trade through the submarine zone and English Channel totalled 170 (including 37 U.S.A. destroyers). In addition we had 32 similar vessels employed on the escort work of the Scandinavian convoy."

"For the Mediterranean convoys we required at least 30 such vessels, giving a grand total of 232. In addition there were the destroyers with the Grand Fleet, Dover and Harwich forces, as well

CHILDREN OR TAXES

TAKE YOUR CHOICE IN GERMANY

Berlin, Nov. 28.
Germans need only produce six children in future to escape personal income tax bouts, it has been revealed.

A new law passed by the cabinet provides a new scale allowing a 15 per cent. reduction in income taxes for the first child; 35 for the second; 65 for the third, 75 per cent. for the fourth, 95% for the fifth, and a 100 per cent. reduction, or elimination entirely of the income tax, for the sixth child.

The law, however, affects only incomes not exceeding 100,000 marks a year.

Children up to 25 can be counted in making income tax returns. The family of ten or more may claim state aid.—United Press.

as those based on various ports for defence purposes, for escorting troopships and hospital ships, &c.—a total for these services of approximately 217 more vessels. Complete total 449.

"At the present time we possess 162 destroyers and flotilla leaders, built and building (of which 108 are over age). (N.B.—The life of a destroyer has been laid down as twelve years.) We have in addition 31 sloops. Grand total 183 for all services (108 over age)."

ADDITIONAL MENACE

"One must not lose sight of the assistance which aircraft can, and did, give in protecting convoys against submarine attack in 1917 and 1918; but aircraft cannot possibly alone give the necessary protection even under favourable conditions of weather and near our shores. On the other hand, aircraft operating from ships on ocean trade routes may be an additional menace to merchant ships."

"It is hardly necessary to point out the difficult position in which the Admiralty would be placed should it become essential in the near future to introduce a convoy system for the protection of our trade."

"Our difficulties in 1917 were very great. Those that would face a future Board would be indeed formidable unless it is realised that our naval forces are inadequate for the work that may be required of them, and steps are taken to make up our deficiencies."

"The fast vessels needed for escort against submarine attack cannot be improvised; cruisers take two years to construct, and even sloops cannot be built, I think, in less than some eight months. It is not time that provision is made to ensure the Empire against possible future disaster?"

OLD WOMAN'S DEATH

STREET FALL LEADS TO DEMISE IN HOSPITAL

A death inquiry which was opened before Mr. J. H. B. Lee at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court yesterday afternoon, had to be adjourned after the medical evidence, on account of the absence of other witnesses.

The inquiry was in regard to the death of Chan Shi-cheung, a 70-year-old woman living at 208 Sai Young Choi Street, Shamshui-po, who succumbed to injuries after a fall.

Dr. K. H. Uttley, who made a post mortem examination on October 29, reported that the woman had an unusually thick skull. He found an external injury, but extensive haemorrhage had occurred inside the skull, involving the lower left brain, this bleeding issuing from a diseased artery on the inside surface of the skull. The woman was old and was not one who could withstand well the result of a blow or fall.

Cerebral Haemorrhage. The cause of death, in the opinion of the doctor, was haemorrhage into the brain owing to the rupture of the artery supplying the left side of the skull.

Dr. Ng Yuk-hoon, resident medical officer at the Kwong Wah Hospital, said that when the woman was admitted on October 27, she was in a comatose condition. The information given was that she had been given a push and had fallen on the roadway. The patient never recovered consciousness, and died. He diagnosed cerebral haemorrhage. The inquiry at this stage was adjourned until 2.30 p.m. on Tuesday.

The jury comprised Messrs. P. C. Fairbairn (foreman), H. M. Campos and P. M. da Silva, jun.

VICTORIAN FLOODS

SWOLLEN RIVERS SUBSIDE IN AFFECTED DISTRICTS

Melbourne, Dec. 7. The swollen waters of the rivers in Gippsland and southern Victoria have almost completely receded, affording relief to thousands of unroofed residents who were isolated by the savage storm last Saturday and Sunday.

The storm, the worst in the history of Victoria, took 40 lives, according to the latest revised list, rendered 8,000 homeless, and caused damage estimated at over 2,500,000.

The death-roll includes the crew of the interstate freighter, which foundered with all hands between Melbourne and Warrnambool.

The damage in Melbourne alone is estimated at over £1,600,000. Flood waters in the capital and suburbs fringing the Maribyrnong and Yarra rivers rose to a depth of many parts of seven and eight feet.

In the country Portland, Casterton, Nelson, Warrnambool, Geelong, Alton, Sale, Koorveerup, Koorveerup and smaller towns in their vicinity suffered most.

In several parts of south Gippsland, train and highway traffic is still held up.

No Labour Saving On China Roads

PLENTY OF MEN TO BE HAD

COMING OF
MOTOR CAR

Shanghai.

Joys of road building in primitive China are not many but at least there is no lack of strong labour to compensate. In part at least, for the dearth of steam shovels, tractors, road rollers and similar equipment.

Personal description comes from a man experienced in the art of highway construction through many years—Mr. O. J. Todd, chief engineer of the China International Famine Relief Commission, who darts in and out of Shanghai frequently in the course of visits to Nanking to consult with Government officials whose co-operation is highly important to his various enterprises.

Mr. Todd always has under way several highway projects of one sort and another, along with other constructive enterprises. Quite often they dovetail, for it is common practice in China to build dikes as protection against flood waters, and then to build some sort of road on top of each dike. Mr. Todd approves of this but prefers that the road be a good one, suitable for motorcars which may or may not already be at hand.

WORK IN THE NORTH.

Some of his most strenuous road-building work, however, has been in mountainous country in remote Shensi and Kansu Provinces in northwestern China. There he has often worked at rebuilding old roads which were all right for pack-trains but hardly the thing for any sort of motor transport. Some of the problems have centred about reduction of grades from 20 to around 7 per cent, often entailing a large amount of circling and detouring, as well as construction of fills similar to those required for railways.

The old Chinese practice has been to operate on a basis of local needs and available transport. That is, the idea of long-haul through traffic was not usually considered with certain notable exceptions such as that famed inland waterway, the Grand Canal, on which tribute rice used to travel from Hangchow, south of Shanghai, to old Peking.

OLD CUSTOMS

Likewise, if a given locality was fond of wheelbarrows—the typical Chinese type with a large wheel at the centre, above and on each side of which might be balanced anything from bags of grain to half a dozen human passengers—the “roads” would be just wide enough for the barrow-wheel and the pusher's feet. Or perhaps donkey traffic, or the more modern ricksha, or the old “Peking cart,” might be customary; highways fit for any of these were not likely to suit a motorcar.

The Famine Relief Commission, operating always with an eye to the future, has changed all that as far as possible, and with the full aid of public-spirited local and national officials.

Nowadays, the idea is to feed hungry people in famine districts, but at the same time to give them work to do—some such work as improving their existing highways, or building new ones. In every case it has been assumed that motorcars, including passenger cars, trucks and buses, would be along soon, and in every case this assumption has been proved right. Usually the cars in question turned out to be sturdy American vehicles with a background of just such conditions built into their manufacture.

The Chinese prove willing and competent workers on such projects although they do not always realize altogether what it is, about. To them, the job often means nothing but rice or other food on which to live.

REORGANISED INFANTRY

EFFECT ON FUTURE OF ARMY

LEWIS AUTOMATIC MAY DISAPPEAR

Provided that the War Office experiment in infantry reorganisation meets with success, the Army in the near future will be drastically remodelled. The change in equipment and tactical employment will affect one-fourth of the Infantry Battalions of the Line, of which there are 125—64 abroad and 62 at home.

I understand that it is not intended immediately to give the 6th Infantry Brigade, which has been selected for the experiment, any type of machine-gun carrier. Presumably the type of machine to be used has not been agreed upon. Since mobility is imperatively necessary in a support battalion and also protection it is assumed that some form of light tank will be supplied when the experiment has passed its initial stage.

The support battalion will be armed with the Vickers machine-gun and the new anti-tank gun. The Infantry battalions of the brigade will have a light machine-gun in each of the three sections of a platoon. This machine-gun, I understand, will be the one which is expected to replace the Lewis automatic.

Brigadier H. M. Wilson, the Commander of the 6th Brigade, will have all the units of his new command available for training towards the end of January next.

The probable conversion of some 30 Battalions of the Infantry of the Line into machine-gun battalions will introduce new problems of infantry organisation. The Cardwell system of reliefs has been a controlling factor in all attempts at Army reorganisation. The Regular Infantry is concerned, were mainly directed to the maintenance in the United Kingdom of a strategic reserve which should be available to reinforce any threatened point in our possessions overseas.

The changes foreshadowed by the latest experiment suggest that the Cardwell relief machinery will undergo some modification.

IF

the claims made are proved a fallacy? Would you buy that article a second time? While advertising is a powerful force in educating as to the uses, merits or money saving advantages of a product, the people are the judges when they make their first purchase. "Delivering the goods" is what they demand, and the scrap heap of failures is piled with goods that could not stand the test of public judgment. 'ASPRO' messages are carefully planned to prove what 'ASPRO' can do to alleviate pain and suffering, and the reason of its success throughout the civilised world is simple, because it fulfils all claims made for it. Its purity is its safety, and its quick action the healing service humanity appreciates. 'ASPRO' conforms to the standard of purity laid down by the British Pharmacopoeia (the guiding authority of the Medical Profession), and the 15 uses enumerated below make it an invaluable quick first-aid emergency in every home.

I obtained very great relief from this treatment; in fact, I do not know how I could have continued to move about without 'ASPRO'. The pain has gradually improved. The pain has gradually improved. The pain has gradually improved. I can now only occasionally, I can 'ASPRO' only occasionally, I can confidentially recommend 'ASPRO' to all sufferers from rheumatism (Sgd.) A. H. BURNS.

THE SAAR VOTE

Britain's offer to contribute a contingent to the international force which is to be sent into the Saar region for the purpose of ensuring order during the period of the plebiscite next month has been warmly acclaimed and promptly accepted by both the French and German Governments. In the latter circumstance there is seen a happy augury for the future of Franco-German relations. The fact that neither French nor German forces are to intervene, coupled with the carefully-planned arrangements made by the League for the holding of the plebiscite, should provide a sufficient guarantee that the people who have to decide the future status of the territory will have perfect freedom in expressing their preferences. The ballot, and not the bullet, is to decide the fate of the Saar region, but, even so, there is a strong feeling in certain quarters that on the issue of the poll the prospect of peace or war in Europe may depend. Opinion in well-informed circles is that the vote will favour Germany, despite the known fact that the situation has been rendered somewhat complicated by reason of the existence of an anti-Hitler sentiment amongst some of those entitled to go to the poll. An observer who has been making a close study of all the factors, on the spot, has given it as his firm conviction that the return of the territory to Germany would probably spell Franco-German peace, whilst, on the other hand, its disannexation from Germany would be a contributory cause of war. This authority says that France, in pursuance of traditional diplomacy, had, before the war and immediately after, long coveted this basis of the Saar, but when the peace settlement was being drawn up found herself opposed by Britain and America. The French then fell back on economic claims, arguing that if there was a dispute about their right to the region, there could be no dispute about the French loss of coal in the devastated regions of Northern France. Thus France, by way of compensation, was permitted to work the Saar mines for a period of fifteen years, with a proviso that at the end of that time the future of the territory should be decided by the people themselves. It is now realised that the compromise was not altogether satisfactory, as it kept alive a perilous question and possibly prevented a Franco-German rapprochement. "The peace-makers shirked their responsibilities," says a commentator; "they made intrigues

NOTES OF THE DAY

IS THERE NO HOPE?

There must be much anxiety in the world chancelleries to-day while governments await the first definite Japanese move to abrogate the Washington Treaty. If the inferences from Mr. Norman Davis's statements are correct, the United States will recall her delegates from London the moment Japan gives notice of abrogation, and the naval conversations will fall flat, and with them much of the hope for a settlement of this apparently insuperable problem. The American statements have the jarring tone of a threat, it would seem. Abrogation will mean a naval race, they declare. "They do not go so far as to suggest, officially, that a naval race will precipitate a war in the Pacific, but there are observers on both sides of the ocean who believe that that is so. There are two voices in this naval argument. That whose words are dictated by Tokyo, declares: "We require security by means of equality." That which has its origin in Washington insists as loudly: "We want equality of security. Both meanings are, in effect, the same. Each one wants a fleet big enough to whip the other."

SUSPICION

While we have every sympathy with the desires of these nations for that blissful era of assured acquiescence, we cannot help but feel that each one of them is perhaps expecting something more than it deserves. For either the United States or Japan to insist upon equal arms equality with the British Empire seems, on the face of it, absurd. However, America has already attained equality with Britain, and no-one has proposed that she should reduce her fleet or accept a 5:3:3 ratio, backed by Britain's pledged word that she should not suffer an attack from Asia; and if it were proposed it would be derided. Nevertheless, it is as good a remedy as any. To make the arrangement fair, Britain would have to guarantee Japan against an aggressor from the other side of the Pacific. Any such arrangement as this, of course, would fall into the category of the ridiculous unless Britain possessed a fleet of much superior strength to any other power and unless she enjoyed the fullest confidence and trust of all the nations. One possibility is as remote as the other. The problem really narrows down to that one point: distrust! Remove that element, and the naval situation and all the rest of the international problem would sort out and solve themselves.

How old is a codfish? Recently a Boston fisherman found a ring in the stomach of a codfish in his catch. The ring had been identified by the Rev. E. T. Drake of the First Presbyterian Church of Orange, Texas, as one he lost while swimming at Corpus Christi, Texas, twenty-eight years ago. This has started fishermen delving possible ages codfish may attain. Some sceptics find it hard to believe, even in the face of this evidence, that a codfish lives to be 28. Furthermore, they think it a long swim from the Gulf of Mexico to the New England fish-ports grounds. This story was found to start up an "I remember" chorus from Altoona, Penna., comes a dispatch that while making a rock garden Adie Black found a watch lost thirty years ago when the ground was part of his father's farm. Sixty years ago a workman building a brick wall to enclose the site in the First National Bank of Sterling, Ill., lost $40 in currency. When the wall was torn down recently the money was found in good condition. David J. Carrough of Ramsey, N. J., reports finding on his farm a turtle on which the initials "J. D. C.—1865" were still faintly discernible. They had been carved there by Mr. Carrough's father sixty-nine years before. The chronicle would be complete now if someone could only find "prosperity" which was mislaid back in 1929.

possible, prolonged uncertainty, opened the doors to national propaganda and political passion, reaching a climax when Europe should have found healing. But what is past cannot be helped; the issue has now to be settled one way or the other. A few years ago, there could be no doubt of a 95 per cent. vote for Germany; to-day, the figure is not placed so high. Even in Deutsche Front circles it is stated that there are about forty per cent. for Hitler, twenty per cent. against, and forty per cent. of hesitants, mostly Catholics. Provided nothing untoward occurs, it is expected that in the end the bulk of the hesitants may decide that they are Germans and that the plebiscite is not for or against Hitler, but for or against Germany.

MR. PEPYS IN HONGKONG

Nov. 30th.—This day I do lie somewhat late as I do procrastinate to go to my office, after ordering having been made. After breakfasting my fast to work in my garden, where I prune my sweet peas and plant out new cabbages. But I am in doubt of the latter, as the leaves ever do seem to be eaten of insects, and I do suspect certain white butterflies of laying eggs upon them whereby the leaf doth rot away. Reading in the new sheet I do find them full of the wedding of H.R.H. the Duke of Kent, and do pray heartily for the happiness of the young pair. And to my mind it is a sad thing that the Prince of Wales takes not a bride, too, though I would fain have him wed to an English maiden. There is news, too, of more rioting in Havana, and I am at a stand to know how it doth remain populated, so many be killed there. But, to be plain, folk there seem so turbulent that I cannot deem them a loss. This night I held St. Andrew's Ball, to which I go not. Nor have I ever taken any pleasure in these dances since they did cease of holding them in the City Hall, but did take greater pleasure with a book before my new electric fire which doth emit a blaze of coals very excellently; and so to bed.

Dec. 1st.—Up very betimes and out of the home at five minutes after eight, as is my custom these days. In my office very busy and I was minded to get away early, but it was not to be, business being heavy upon me. Yet I do get to the Clubb by half after noon, where I meet Sir R. Harpenden and his lady and my wife, poor wretch, and so in his motor coach to the Valley, where my wife and I do eat luncheon with friends, and might good cheer. And I did approve most heartily the decoration of the table with mine hostess's own hands in gladness, which, alas, I do fail to grow myself. Afterwards we fall to watching the races and wonder at Liberty Day who not only doth break his own record by eight upon five seconds, but could have done some seconds faster as Mr. B. Proulx do assure me. And indeed it is mighty clear that we know not what the pony can really do, as there is none to extend him, and I am... weight for inches against Able Amazon over a mile and a half. Later my wife and I find that we do win a small prize in the sweepstakes, and I do not my creditors also will be glad of it. I do go to the Theatre later to a rehearsal of "Fresh Fields" and the others do find me and carry me by coach up to the Peake. So home to dinner, my wife and I both mighty sleepy.

Dec. 2nd. (Lord's Day).—I was this day minded to lie late but did arise at about a half after eight, there being so much movement in the house. So to my bath which now seems in pretty good order, but at the expense of my wife's which doth run mighty foul and of a yellow colour, and I am somewhat out of temper at the many faults in the service of my house, which to my mind wants a stringent setting in order. Later I go into my garden and fall to weeding. After luncheon, I did amend the hanging of my pictures, and later going forth toward the Peake Clubb, I do go in but find no soul there which seems to me mighty strange, it being past seven of the clock.

Dec. 3rd.—Leaving the Lower Station this morning I did note upon a tree beside the Murray Parade ground desiring slow driving as troops be in Camp, but seeing none I do make a note to tell the Military Intelligence Office that the Camp broke up upon the last Thursday, when the transport sailed. Though as I learn she sailed not very far, one gallant officer having procrastinated to discover if his detachment were on board or no until after the shippe leaves the wharf. Of which I do fear he will hear more. All round I do hear that later on the Somersetshire to be in collision with another vessel by Gap Rock, though no harm done on either side. But of this I do find no confirmation, and do believe it to be a naughty lie. Yet I would fain know how these rumours do start.

Dec. 4th.—Sad news from Melbourne of the floods there. Here I do hear that the Cycling Clubb, which I had thought to be as healthy as any in the Colony, doth disband itself. Yet I do most heartily that a speedy end far outdoes slow decomposition, which heretofore I have known in some cases.

Dec. 5th.—Up very betimes and to the office where I do hastily set things in order, and so to the Cricket Clubb where Oxford and Cambridge do take luncheon together before their encounter. And I was minded that this year at least I shall pay for two luncheons, my Aunt, as old Samuel did call Oxford, having a mighty strong side. Yet in the end we did pay for our own and no other, the Oxford declaration being overlong delayed. All day the weather grows colder and I do on my thicker garments before I go to dine with Sir R. Harpenden and his lady and so to the Play House to see the piece called "Fresh Fields" by Mr. I. Novello, done by the A.D.C. And I do find it mighty to my taste, the players being most excellent and the play as funny as ever I heard. And I did quite lose my heart to Miss Jeffries who did play the part of a common little Australian girl. Driving home after and in a chair to my house and I believe I am colder than ever I have been before, the wind being most icy and cutting like a knife.

Dec. 6th.—Bitter cold and I do on every warm garment I do find until I doubt not I do present a most portly figure. Buy all day and at night my wife and I do do a most and much pleasant conversation. Home by tram and rickshaws, very cold, but mirthful. And so to bed.

BULLS AND INNERS

Even people who don't play cards have been affected by the cold snap.

The nudists' favourite game, is, we understand, strip poker!

We heard a man ask for turkey and plum pudding for his dollar menu yesterday. There was no need to request hard nautical!

The time is now here when mistletoe is about to be added to overhead expenses.

"Give and let give" appears to be the popular motto just now.

The Hongkong Government notices that Crown Rent is payable on or before December 25. It evidently believes in compulsory giving during the Christmas season.

Last week a burglar stole a lady's fur coat. The skunk.

The turkey's future: Mainly fare.

Crackers and wise-crackers will soon come into their own.

We suppose some of these nudists will even object to dressing the Christmas tree.

Cracker motto—"Puller blotto!"

Judging from the conversation overheard on the Peak in the early hours of a recent cold morning, some people quickly become inarticulate.

We understand that the Hongkong A.A.'s slogan against reckless drivers is "Upside and at 'em!"

Three lads were last week sent to gaol for stealing over a hundred watches. Doing time for taking time.

New storm signals are to come into force in Hongkong on New Year's Day. The old ones will, however, still serve when hubby comes home late from the office.

Lots of people we meet seem to be doing their Christmas hinting early this year.

A clergyman says he would like to see everyone filled with the spirit of Christmas. He can send a case round to the office any time now.

Babe Ruth is known as the "Swat King." Pity nobody took him round some of the Colony's fly-ridden regions yesterday.

It was so cold on The Peak this week that nobody there seemed to mind being told to go to the warmer regions.

Christmas Weather Forecast:—Puffs will be prevalent; permanent waves general; the future complexion uncertain.

To-morrow, dancing will be indulged in on the Tushan between here and Macao. It is anticipated that on the return journey, many a Hongkong flapper will find her Macao soul-mate.

We hasten to correct the rumour that the local angler who swore that he caught a huge fish last Sunday, was a sworn measurer.

It is said that people are buying their Christmas presents earlier than usual this year. This is the way to make them cumshaw!

Men who marry during the next week or so will be Christmas-tied and thereafter, tongue-tied.

We understand that holly is being imported by the Clover Flower Shop. Just the berries?

Laurel is a Hardy Christmas decoration.

The novelist who said women nowadays appear to be getting more level-headed must have been deceived by those flat hats they're now wearing.

The lift-boys who were sent to gaol this week are hardly likely to find the experience elevating.

A lecturer says that to achieve success you should keep your ears open and your mouth shut. To eat a mango, just reverse the process.

"How can you make a mistake in buying a diamond-studded, platinum watch for two dollars and a quarter?"

Dresses to Wear

at the BRIDGE TABLE

These afternoon dresses use plain skirts and put most of their fascinating details above the waist

A STREET-LENGTH dress of smooth black rayon crepe is shown at the upper left. It has a straight skirt and a fascinating bodice with raglan sleeves, intricate front seams and a belt of self material. A vestee of pleated crepe fills in the deep cowl neckline.

THE GIRL WHO is standing to watch the bridge game wears a flattering frock of lucia velvet in a rich shade of deep rose. It has raglan sleeves with wide cuffs and a boat-shaped yoke. A back view of the dress is worn by the model who holds the ace of spades.

PERFECT for an afternoon of bridge is the dark green jacket dress of silk alpaca, at the right, above. It has a lace yoke and a tiny stand-up collar ending in ties that loop over the lace. The jacket is finished with minute buttons and loops of the same fabric.

BLACK TRANSPARENT velvet is used to fashion this one-piece dress with a ruffled jabot of gold-dotted black taffeta. Note the becoming round neckline and the long, tight sleeves that button at the wrists.

FOR THE HOSTESS nothing could be more charming than this ankle-length gown of brown transparent velvet. It has a soft cowl neckline and cape-like sleeves of beaded net.

IT'S practically no trouble at all to pick out appropriate bridge clothes this year. The new fashions have interesting details centred above the waistline anyway, and that's what a smart woman wants to find when she starts to shop for frocks to wear at bridge parties.

Skirts are perfectly plain and slim-fitting. A few have pleats, of course, and some are circular in the manner of Vionnet the famous French couturier, who started the vogue for the bias cut. But, generally speaking, skirts aren't so very important. Bodices, on the other hand, have never been so widely featured.

Sleeves do their part to enhance the new mode. But they do it rather subtly. None of those horrible huge pads stick out on shoulder lines as they did a couple of seasons ago. Instead, shoulders and sleeves are gracefully sloping—designed to flatter and not distort the natural outlines of your silhouette.

RAGLAN and dolman sleeves are perfect for bridge.

There are jabots of gold-dotted taffeta and shimmering lame on neat little frocks of woollen. One bridge dress has a cowl neckline, extending almost to the belt in front and filled in with a vestee of box-pleated crepe. Another, of dark green crepe, has a shoulder yoke of real lace. Crinkled and wrinkled silks, rather formal-looking woollens and soft selvetts are the most popular fabrics for informal afternoon clothes, and therefore are very suitable for bridge parties.

Wear smart little turbans or suave tricorne hats with them. See that your other accessories are more formal than the ones you ordinarily wear when you dress for the street.

FOR instance, gloves, purse and pumps of black suede change the appearance of a street dress that you usually wear with leather accessories. And a touch of the right jewellery—perhaps ear-rings that clip on and a dress clip to match—can lend an air of glamour to the plainest frock.

One thing to remember about the bridge party is that the note of casual informality must be carried through from the very beginning. After all, the chief purpose of the party is to enjoy a game of bridge—and the secondary purpose is to enjoy an hour or so of chit-chat with your friends. It goes without saying that an elaborate costume is not in the least essential for either of these aims.

For that reason you don't want your bridge costume to be too dressy or over-elaborate. If it is, you'll defeat your own purpose—which is to have a pleasant afternoon. What you are looking for is a frock that will permit you to look your very best without calling attention to itself in such a way that it dominates your mood.

It is precisely this kind of frock that is being offered in abundance by all the smarter shops this fall.

REVELATIONS OF THE MUNITIONS TRUST INVESTIGATIONS

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Sixteen years after the last shot in the war to "make the world safe for democracy"—

The world is overloaded with dictatorships and its air reeks with more rumours of imminent war than ever before.

Some 200 treaties of amity have been signed and they all look like so many "scraps of paper". Disarmament efforts have broken down. New generations of cannon fodder are ready to be unfurled.

About $10,000,000,000 has been spent in these 10 years on "insurance against war"—munitions, armaments and military establishments.

PROBE SHOWS COURAGE

And the only note of slight comfort in the whole picture is the fact that after 16 years a government has had the courage to investigate the munitions trust—the "war insurance" agents—and their method of high pressure salesmanship. On the theory that these bilge go-getters are always potential, and sometimes actual, war-makers.

The Senate Munitions Committee has unearthed enough evidence to provide at last three square meals of thought. (It is going to reveal a lot more, beginning early in December.) You can take your choice from the gruesome menu, but here are a few samples:

It has been shown, for instance, that the United States hardly could fight a war with any country in the world to-day without the assurance that its soldiers or sailors would be slaughtered by weapons produced by American factories or American brains—and sold by American salesmanship.

ARMS AIDED PROSPERITY

Submarines, warplanes, explosives, gas, machine guns and other sinews of war have been "pushed" around the world in these 16 years and were part of the great flood of American exports turned loose in the post-war prosperity era. The Navy, War, Commerce and State departments have helped to promote sales. In some cases public servants—supported by American taxpayers—have helped sell to foreign countries what were supposedly our own war secrets. And many of the buying nations paid with money obtained from American investors for bonds which are worthless to-day.

SEA—Now air bombs add to menace at sea.

American submarine patents helped make possible the German U-boats which took many American lives at sea. They're now being used to make Japanese submarines.

CHEAP POWDER SECRET

When the world was considering a boycott of Japan for its violation of treaties in Manchuria and China, a big American company sold Japan a secret process for producing cheap powder. To-day, most of the "merchants of death" in this country and abroad, seem to be shipping their wares into Nippon—so often considered our next antagonist in war.

Participation of munitions makers in war scares has long since been shown. War scares lead to war. American munitions makers also have been

AIR—Lite craft replace clumsy wartime planes.

LAND—Will there be a repetition of this?

exposed as egging on South American countries to increased armaments against each other. It was Lamont du Pont who admitted that activities of the United States in a friendly and peaceful South American country would, if exposed, lead to rioting and destruction of life and property.

MORE EXPOSÉS

The Nye committee has shown how munitions makers take lightly efforts of the State Department and foreign offices to reduce armaments. Later it will expose direct attempts to thwart such efforts—such as the successful work of William B. Shearer, in the employ of American shipbuilders who still receive our naval contracts, to break up the three-power Geneva naval conference of 1927.

But in the story as revealed to date—of greed, fantastic war profits, wholesale bribery, lobbying, patent-swapping, spreading of fear and hate, prodding of nations into greater war preparations—there is an especially clear chapter which may be of particular interest to such veterans as can remember whom we were fighting in the last great war.

GERMANY ARMED

The one pleasant idea that arose from the smoldering battle-fields with their mounds of dead after November 11, 1918, was that united nations could enforce some kind of international control and so keep the peace.

The best way to keep the peace, everyone then agreed, was to keep Germany disarmed. That's why the Versailles treaty prohibits German "exportation or importation of arms."

To-day, everyone agrees that Hitlerized Germany is armed. And that Hitlerized Germany is the chief menace of the peace of Europe. Machine guns began to trickle into Germany and soon there was a general flow of war materials. America's contribution has been chiefly in airplane engines and patents.

It also appears that the United States is headed into a naval race with Japan, which is exactly the sort of thing the munitions makers love but doesn't lead away from war.

ACROSS ATLANTIC BY MOTOR-BOAT

By MORRIS GILBERT.

Paris, Nov. 8.

The adventurous career of Madame Juanita Desbriere Irwin, Paris-born wife of the American petroleum engineer, Captain Daniel Irwin, is reaching its climax in her plan to cross the Atlantic in 90 hours in a specially designed motor-sped-boat built on submarine lines.

"Such a plan," Mme. Irwin told the correspondent, "has never before been attempted. Apart from its sporting angle, its success would be highly interesting from a technical point of view."

"It can be done," Mme. Irwin continued, "and we hope to make the attempt in August, 1935."

Madame Irwin. "It can be done."

The boat, 65 feet long, 9 feet wide, has been designed by John Hacker, naval engineer of Mount Clemens, Mich. Its lines, Mme. Irwin explained, will be similar to those of submarines, so that it can pass beneath the crest of big waves.

It will be completely closed and its bridge will be hardly raised above the general top lines of the craft. Visibility is to be assured by a 16-foot-high periscope. The hull will be of triple thickness of wood, and the vessel is to be divided into several perfectly watertight compartments. There will be a small cabin below the enclosed bridge, with four berths. The rest of the craft will be taken up by motors and fuel reservoirs with a capacity of 16,000 litres. At present, the plans call for a motor developing about 850-horse-power, with a speed of 35 knots.

The equipment will include a powerful radio sending and receiving set, a radio compass, a strong searchlight on a military mast, and an auxiliary engine developing 9 knots in case of breakdown.

After consultation with Dr. Kimball of the U.S. meteorological service, it was decided the best season for such a venture is August, because the icebergs which fringe the northern route are then melted.

Mme. Irwin, daughter of a distinguished French army colonel who was an authority on military affairs and a historian of note, was first married to the Count Le Moine des Mares who was killed in active flying service during the Great War. She herself served as an army nurse on the French front and later in the Sahara. With her first husband she visited many distant places, such as the Igunga Falls in the heart of Africa, and the Chaco country in South America.

Her second marriage, to Captain Irwin, brought her more adventures. She lived for some time in Colombia, Venezuela and the West Indies, where she had all interests. She travelled along through Brazil, up the Amazon to Manaus.

Mme. Irwin raised leopards in Colombia and some of her favourite pets have been snakes.

These days, she is a volunteer donor of blood to sufferers from infantile paralysis, having been a victim of this illness as a child.

WHEN PAY DAY AT LAST ROLLS AROUND THE FIRST THOUGHT IS ADORNMENT.

SOME LADIES DON'T WAIT FOR THEIR HUSBANDS TO COME HOME. THEY MEET THEM AS THEY LEAVE THE OFFICE.

TWENTY YEARS AN EXPLORER

CAPTAIN MAISSON IN COLONY

An interesting visitor to the Colony at present is Captain E. A. Gerrard Maission, explorer, author, scientist and photographer, who has spent no less than twenty years in exploration work, during which he has undergone many exciting experiences.

His schooner, the Aldythie Estella, is at present in Yokohama undergoing repairs consequent on heavy damage which it experienced during a recent typhoon which carried her five hundred miles north of her set course. Captain Maission hopes, however, to bring the vessel to Hongkong in the near future, when he will make a three weeks' stay and most likely give a number of lectures on his experiences.

Captain Maission considers that this schooner is one of the finest equipped exploration vessels afloat, being furnished with the most modern instruments available for navigation, soundings, and other scientific purposes.

He has written over fifty books and more than a hundred articles, and is the possessor of a wonderful collection of photographs taken in every part of the globe. He has sailed upon practically every sea, and has been fourteen times round the world, once in 51 days, which he claims to be a record.

SPURIOUS COINS MAN CAUGHT AT BOAT WHARF

Charges of the possession of 277 counterfeit Hongkong ten-cent pieces and 50 five-cent pieces at Canton Boat Wharf, and the possession of a further lot of 25 counterfeit ten-cent pieces at No. 125 Apin Street, Samsui district, were admitted by an unemployed man, Lam Ming, when he appeared before Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Central Police Court this morning.

Defendant pleaded for leniency so that he could start life anew.

Detective-Sergeant C. Goodwin, prosecuting, said defendant was arrested on information on Thursday night coming from the Canton Steamboat wharf, where the ss. Lungshan had berthed. Counterfeit coins, amounting to $22.50, were found concealed in various pockets in his inner jacket which he wore over a long coat. Genuine money, totalling $5.39, was found in his purse attached to a giraffe. Yesterday a warrant was taken out and a search at his house, No. 125 Apin Street, resulted in a discovery of 25 counterfeit ten-cent pieces wrapped in a paper in a drawer. Defendant had a mother, wife and younger brother resident in Hongkong.

Three months' hard labour was imposed.

COPPER CONFERENCE

ALL ROUND SACRIFICE SUGGESTED

London, Dec. 7. Following various informal meetings held in London, in a most favourable atmosphere, the way has now been paved for a European Copper Conference in January.

American delegates will probably attend, but the meeting place is not known yet.

European nations, South Africa, South America and Canada have agreed to make some sacrifice in production, but are relying on the goodwill of the Americans to do likewise.

The news greatly assisted sentiment on the London copper market, prices showing a good advance.

Chief interest, however, was centred on the London and New York Stock Exchange, where copper shares were eagerly sought, with resultant sharp rises.—Reuter.

ANOTHER SUSPECT

Peking, Dec. 8.

Under orders from the Central Government, another local educationist, Mr. Hsin Yi-jing, headmaster of the First Middle School, has been charged with Communist affiliations, and is being transferred to Nanking together with two other important Communists for trial. Mr. Shiao Chi-wu, Professor of the Peking Teachers' College, arrested earlier, may now be released.—Central News.

ART EXHIBITION

Nanking, Dec. 8.

The Preliminary Committee in charge of organisation of the Chinese Art Exhibition to be held at London next year, has resolved to hold a "test exhibition" at Shanghai next March. Entries will be confined to porcelains, bronze articles and pictures for the most part.—Central News.

IN WIRELESS TOUCH

The following ships are expected to be in wireless communication with Hongkong to-day: Fridrun, Shonchihi, Trave, Antoni, Anhui, British Monarch, City of Evansville, Suwa Maru, Noshiro Maru.

LOOKING ROUND THE STORES

SPECIAL BUYERS' GUIDE FOR CHRISTMAS SHOPPERS

A pleasure to visit at any time, the showrooms of Messrs. Arts & Crafts, Ltd., are particularly attractive at this time of the year, there being many gifts of utility which are so much appreciated when given as Christmas presents.

Of modern furniture, there is, of course, an imposing selection; the most inviting of arm chairs, well-sprung sofas to match, occasional tables, smokers' stands, writing tables, delightful bedroom suites, etc. The display of framed and unframed pictures is also noticeable, there being some excellent sporting and hunting studies by well-known artists. The range of original signed etchings makes another sensible gift suggestion.

Of table lamps in porcelain, bronze figures, leather and brass bookstands, writing table requisites, crystal table glass sets, vases, bowls and other objects d'art there is a most comprehensive collection, offering practical ideas for beautifying the home.

In the carpet department, where many new and modern designs in beautiful Axminster and other floor coverings, a few genuine Oriental rug floor rugs are displayed—rare gifts of originality and, of course, unique both in design and quality.

Some of the dining and bedroom suites made from imported Australian woods are distinctive in the extreme, the beautiful grains and tones of the beautiful timbers employed being used to secure the best possible effects.

INLAND WATER SURVEY

BIG PROJECT IN ENGLAND

London, Dec. 7.

A decision to undertake a comprehensive inland water survey for Great Britain was announced in Commons by the Minister of Health, Sir Hilary Young, who has been in consultation with the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research and other departments concerned, which will co-operate in the work.

Information for the purposes of the survey will be obtained from water undertakers, local health boards and other qualified bodies, and a Water Survey Committee, composed of persons outside the Government departments, will be appointed to advise on the survey as it progresses. Preliminary work has already been put in hand.—British Wireless.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

IN GENERAL, TREACHERY, THOUGH AT FIRST SUFFICIENTLY CAUTIONED BY THE END REVEALS ITSELF.—Latin.

It is notified that Dr. R. S. Bagby, a noted doctor of Assam, has been elected President of the Indian Medical Association for the year 1935.

The Pope's Exemptions empowering Dr. Karol Poczta to act as Polish Consul-General in London with jurisdiction in Hongkong has received His Majesty's signature.

His Excellency the Governor has appointed Colonel Edwards, St. George's, D.S.O., to be a Member of the Authorized Architects' Council Committee, vice Colonel Stuart Boyd, D.S.O., resigned.

The Hongkong A.D.C. gave another performance of "Fresh Fields" at the China Fleet Club Theatre last night in the presence of a big and enthusiastic audience. One of the players came through with flying colours, all the parts being splendidly taken.

In order that a complete list may be maintained for record purposes it is requested that these ladies and gentlemen resident in Hongkong other than those now serving in His Majesty's Forces, who have had any decoration conferred upon them by His Majesty the King, will inform the Chief Clerk, Colonial Secretariat, unless this has already been done, within 14 days.

It is learned that Lt.-Cmdr. F. H. E. Skyrms, the Anti-Piracy Officer and instructor to the Hongkong Naval Defence Force, and attached to the Commodore's Staff on the Tamara, has resigned his commission in the Royal Navy to take up an appointment with Messrs. Jardine Matheson and Co., Ltd., in Shanghai. He will work with the floating staff of the Indo-China Steam Navigation Co., Ltd.

The Gazette contains the draft of an Ordinance to further and protect the activities in Hongkong of the St. John Ambulance Association and the St. John Ambulance Brigade Overseas and to incorporate the Director for the time being of the Ambulance Department of the Order of St. John in Hongkong and the Treasurer and Secretary for the time being of the Hongkong Branch of the St. John Ambulance Association as Custodian Trustees.

There are numerous other suggestions, which a visit will soon reveal. It should be noted that owing to the rise in the Hongkong dollar, all prices are now subject to a discount of ten per cent.

POWELL'S GIFTS

It has long been noticed, and frequently commented upon, that practical men prefer practical gifts, and under this category must be included the many suggestions offered at Powell's.

Neckties are always acceptable, and the wide selection being down at this store will satisfy the most exacting taste. Amongst these are the smart Foulard and Macleod hand-woven silk ties, always appreciated. A special feature is a fine quality of Irish linen handkerchiefs, moderately priced, upon which the initials of the recipient will be worked free of charge.

For the colder weather such as we are experiencing so early this year, Jaeger pullovers, pullovers and cardigans are shown in a wide range, while such useful items of the male wardrobe as pyjamas, dressing gowns, white silk scarves, socks, slippers, travelling rugs, shirts (with two collars to match), sports shirts, etc. are to be seen in profusion.

It is gratifying to note that many people are already selecting their presents at Powell's, probably remembering that it is not wise to leave the filling of their Christmas gift lists until the last moment.

STILL HOPE FOR NAVAL PACT

all replacements, except the aircraft carriers, which because they are of a new type might reasonably be called additions to the navy.

At present nearly 80 ships in the American fleet are over age. The American Navy is aiming at a steady building for replacement, instead of periods of frantic re-arming with periods of inactivity.

The building of twenty naval vessels annually would keep the American navy up to date, he said, and would keep that section of the shipbuilding industry employed and efficient.—Reuter Special.

GRAF ZEPPELIN MAKES HISTORY

KEEPS SCHEDULE TO MINUTE OVER OCEAN

BIGGER SUCCESSOR NEARS COMPLETION

BY HOWARD SIEPEN

Unobtrusively, yet with heroic consistency, the Graf Zeppelin has been making for six years a definite and important contribution toward greater friendship among nations. While headlines have blazed with the doings of heavier-than-air craft on their risky adventurings across the seas, the Graf has been safely piloted by Dr. Hugo Eckener into the position of a regular passenger carrier to South America. To be sure, the ship's history is replete with adventure, but its feats have become so recurrent and without mishap that the element of news is rapidly disappearing from them. The fact that its scheduled crossings of the South Atlantic are noted, if at all, only on the inside pages of newspapers, indicates the status of regularity, as contrasted with novelty, won by Dr. Eckener for his ship.

In terms of flying hours, converted into days, the Graf has spent about four and a half months over the waters of the North and South Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. It has made 64 ocean crossings and has circled over four of the five continents. It has pushed its silver nose far north over the icy wastes of the arctic regions and flown for 30 hours on end through dense fog, has weathered heavy storms, skirted typhoons, passed through tropical rains and the dense smoke of forest fires in Asia.

But the Graf's crowning achievement undoubtedly is its regular passenger service between Europe and South America, maintained during the past two years. Business men and statesmen, even children travelling alone, have entrusted themselves to this sturdy ship and its veteran crew. Comfortable cabins, a comparatively spacious dining room and lounge combined, hot and cold running water in the lavatories, in addition to excellent meals, tend to make these swift ocean crossings a recreation.

FINE RECORD

The record of the ship's flights shows a continual expansion of its use and utility. The Graf's first transoceanic passenger flight on a commercial basis in October, 1929, was repeated in the following year. On its return trip from this second visit the airship crossed the Atlantic from Lakehurst to Friedrichshafen, Germany, in the record time of 2 days, 7 hours and 21 minutes.

In the same year, the cruise around the world was made. The airship left Friedrichshafen in the morning of Aug. 15, 1929. In the evening of the same day it had already reached Russian territory. Twenty-four hours later it crossed the Ural Mountains and was speeding into Siberia; 48 hours later it had left the Asiatic continent behind; in yet another 24 hours it landed at Tokyo, with enough fuel on board to have carried on as far as Los Angeles.

On the flight across Siberia the Graf traversed hundreds of miles of desolate aways, crossed desert, forest districts and sped through the canyons of a mountain the exact altitude of which could not be determined from the available maps. From Tokyo the airship flew in dense fog across the Pacific Ocean in little more than three days to Los Angeles. Lakehurst was the goal of the third lap. Then the helmsman turned the ship toward Friedrichshafen, its home port, reached after having covered 34,200 kilometers (21,375 miles) in 12½ flying days, carrying an average of 24 passengers apart from the crew.

INAUGURATION

In 1930, the following year, the first flight across the South Atlantic was made, which was to become the basis for the present-day regular South American service. This flight formed the first lap of a triangular cruise from Friedrichshafen to South America, North America, and back to Europe.

The South American flight was repeated three times in the following year. In this year the Graf drew its silver line across the skies of four continents: America, Africa (Egypt), Europe and Asia. The last continent was skirted on the arctic flight, which also took place in 1931.

This flight into the arctic regions was entirely different from the previous flights. Sixteen arctic, meteorological and aeronautical experts and camera men were on board. They came from four countries and soon had converted the lounge and dining saloon into a laboratory, study, observation and conference room. Weird looking cameras of huge dimensions stuck their inquisitive noses out of windows. Charts and instruments littered the tables.

GRAF ZEPPELIN MAKES HISTORY

In every corner somebody was busy with his particular research work.

The actual arctic flight started on July 28, 1931, from Leningrad. The airship had flown to that city from Friedrichshafen with about two dozen sledges, a dozen tents and provisions for about four months on board for an emergency. But this emergency never occurred. The Graf flew north over the fog-covered Barents Sea to the Franz Joseph Islands where it descended on the water to exchange greetings and mail with the Russian icebreaker Malygin, anchored in a bay of Hooker Island. The ice, however, came drifting up so rapidly toward the airship, resting like a graceful bird on the waters of the arctic sea, that after a short quarter of an hour the ship had to take to the air again.

POLAR HEIGHTS

The most northerly point reached was Cape Fligely (81° 50'). From there the airship sped at 100 kilometers (62.5 miles) an hour through the light polar night at a height of 1,000 meters (3,280 feet) along the northern rim of the world to Severnaya Zemlya, an island little known. The island was reached in the morning and studied from the air. Then the homeward journey was begun.

After a three-day flight, beginning with the departure from Leningrad, the Graf landed in Berlin straight from the arctic sea. In these 71 hours territory had been covered—and this with all personal comfort—which it would have taken many months to traverse with sledge and dog team. Many important corrections could be entered on the maps.

In the following year, 1932, the South American service became firmly established. Not less than nine regular flights to Brazil were made. In that year also trips to Holland and England and 17 cruises of Switzerland were sandwiched in.

STEADY SERVICE

In 1933, however, the airship was used almost exclusively on the trans-Atlantic route. Again nine flights were made to South America, but this time they did not terminate at the first Brazilian port reached; Pernambuco, as had been the case in previous years. The service was now extended down to Rio de Janeiro, prolonging the flight by another 24 hours. The outward-bound trip to Rio de Janeiro took about 4½ days; the return trip about 5½ days. Fast steamships from Hamburg require 13 days for the single passage. The fare of the airship is somewhat higher, or 1,500 marks from Friedrichshafen to Rio de Janeiro, as compared with 1,300 marks charged by the steamship companies.

The high degree of regularity which this service to South America has reached, placing it side by side with other more established transportation systems, is seen from the fact that the last five flights were made at fortnightly intervals, and that on the whole the schedule was adhered to as issued for the entire year in spring, not unlike the snail-like lists of steamers. On two consecutive outward-bound trips, the time for crossing to Pernambuco differed only by two minutes on a voyage lasting three days.

Last year the airship covered 212,253 kilometers (132,658 miles) in 2,101 hours carrying 1,314 passengers and roughly 8,000 kilograms (17,600 pounds) of mail and freight. The last flight was a triangular cruise, taking the airship down to Rio de Janeiro, then up to Chicago and from there back to Europe. Such flights over enormous distances, linking Europe with North and South America, are no longer regarded in the country of the Zeppelin airships as particularly outstanding events. Of the regular South American trips the press, in fact, takes little notice now.

ACCEPTED

Thus the world is beginning to accept commercial airship services over oceans and continents as something normal. For many years Dr. Hugo Eckener has been working with untiring energy and courage for the establishment of airship communication as another means of dependable and comfortable transportation. By the end of last year the Graf Zeppelin had made 355 flights, totalling 743,287 kilometers (464,683 miles), covered in 7,342 hours and 51 minutes in the six years of its existence. It had carried 8,900 passengers apart from the crew, as well as 20,197 kilograms (44,495 pounds) of mail and 37,631 kilograms (82,668 pounds) of freight.

When Dr. Eckener's new ship, capable of accommodating 50 passengers on two decks, one above the other, is ready this year, as anticipated, the world may hear of further progress through this new instrument for bringing the nations closer together.

TENNISCHAMPIONSHIP TIES TO-DAY

Canton, Dec. 7.
The finals of the Ladies' Open Singles Championship and Men's Open Singles Championship of the annual tournaments of the Shameen Lawn Tennis Club will be played tomorrow (Saturday). The Men's Championship will commence at 3 p.m. and the Ladies' Championship at 4 p.m. The contestants for the men's are G. Bodiker and Chas. E. Watson, and the match will be the best out of five sets. The winners of the semi-finals of the Ladies' Championship are Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. Kanter, who will play for the best out of three sets.

Although it is expected that Bodiker will gain the trophy for the men, being a much younger player than Watson; it is expected to be a very keenly contested match, since Watson knows all the tricks of the trade, and also is in very good training, though he natural; can not get across the court so quickly as Bodiker.

The ladies seem well matched, Mrs. Phillips playing a very steady but more of a defensive game, and Mrs. Kanter being a pretty strong player, but not quite so active as her opponent.—Our Own Correspondent.

LADIES' TENNIS

Further Progress In Championships

In the Ladies' Doubles tennis championship of the Colony, Mrs. A. M. Conder and Mrs. J. P. Whelan were Miss N. Wolfe and Mrs. L. Mendel, 8-6, 6-2.

The abandoned match between Miss M. Griffiths and Mrs. Chiu Chun-chiu has been concluded, the Kowloon C. C. player winning the final set by 6-3. The match was previously left over with each player having won one set.

At the meeting of the Ladies Golf Union executive council it was decided to accept the invitations of the Australian and New Zealand Ladies' Golf Unions for a touring team to visit those Dominions during the early autumn of 1935.

"Ee-Tal-Yah" On-a da Ball

By H. de WINTON WIGLEY

Highbury. The great battaglia is about to begin. The English and the Italian squad are already on the field. Me, I am English, but I have arrived in a char-a-banc filled with Italian signoras, signorinas and a few signori.

I am the only Englishman for yards around, wedged in the grandstand at Highbury. Signor Macaroni, he is sitting next to me and he is the only Italian near to speak the English and the way he speaks it is having a strong effect on the way I speak it.

The signoras and signorinas all wear the flag of their beloved country. Signor Macaroni, he told me that he is excited over the football.

"EE-TAL-YAH!" Plenty of the signoras and signorinas no apiggetly English. They speak Italian. Oh, yes! They speak and make-a da beg about.

"Ee-tal-yah!" they scream all the time. This is not just a ball-fight. It is a beg national affair.

The beginning it is not-a much-a good for Italia—no. Signor Drake he getta da ball. Signor Ceresoli he make-a da foul and Parbitto, Signor Olsen, he blow da whistle for a penalty. We spettatori, we hold da breath. One signorina by me, she look faint.

Viva Italia! Signor Ceresoli puncha da ball and make-a da save. Viva Ceresoli! Signor Macaroni, he kissa da signorina and she wave-a da sign. But Signor Brook with the fair hair who plays for Manchester City, he getta da ball twice and make-a da goal each time.

"Ee-tal-yah! Ee-tal-yah!" shout the Signorinas and Signor Maca-

Solis (Royal Welch Fusiliers); and Lieut. J. R. C. Hamilton (Royal Engineers); Corp. Hardy (South Wales Borderers); Pte. Gilmore (South Wales Borderers); Pte. Jones (South Wales Borderers); Fusiliers Morgan (Royal Welch Fusiliers); Fusilier Barry (Royal Welch Fusiliers); Spr. Sandfield (Royal Engineers); and Fusilier Armstrong (Royal Welch Fusiliers).

CLUB SUSPENSION?

(By "Linesman")

The Young Indians are again in the limelight of local soccer according to information I have received this morning. The Radio have been requested by the H.K.F.A. not to play A. J. Hussain, one of the Young Indians who signed transfer forms with them shortly after the recent trouble, until further notice.

As far as I have been able to ascertain this move has been made by the F.A. as drastic steps are to be taken at the meeting of the F.A. Council on Monday week when the withdrawal of the Young Indians will be the chief topic for discussion.

It is rumoured that a suspension order might be considered against the whole Club, which, if I interpret such an order correctly would mean that none of the members of the Club would be eligible to play for any other team under the jurisdiction of the Hongkong Football Association.

If this order is brought into effect it will be rather hard on Hussain. His position is rather different from the remainder of the Club members. As soon as it was rumoured that the Young Indians were withdrawing, he joined the Radio, his transfer papers being accepted by the F.A. about three weeks ago. Since then he has played for them on two occasions, against the R.A.S.C. and last week against the Club de Recreo. It will be extremely interesting to know the F.A. decision in regard to these two games.

Hussain has only played in the Young Indians, side twice this year, against the Engineers and in the match with the University, a fixture which the Young Indians fulfilled after they had been asked to reconsider their withdrawal. He was in Amoy during the first few weeks of the season and only returned to the Colony two months ago.

FUSILIERS DEBUT

(By "Linesman")

Numerous postponements and alterations have been necessitated in the local soccer programme during the week-end on account of the Lai Wah Cup matches being played to-day and the fact that the Volunteer Camp is being continued over the week-end.

Needless to say the Lai Wah Cup games will be the centre of attraction embracing as they do four of the strongest combinations which can be put into the field in Hongkong.

The Civilians-Navy game should produce some sparkling football but the chances of victory are rather on the side of the Civilians. They have five Club players included, among them being Ernie Strange and "Bunny" Bickford. I was rather surprised however to see these two particular players in the side as Strange has not been showing up to form of late and Bickford has not played in the Colony since his return from England. The latter has been selected purely on last year's reputation which, I personally think is most decidedly bad policy.

ly think is most decidedly bad policy.

The Chinese, who are fielding the South China team as their representatives, should not have much difficulty in entering the final from their match with the Army. The Army are not very strong this year.

There are no First Division matches for to-day, and in the Second Division the Navy should easily take the two points from the Club, while the East Lanes should be able to defeat the South China second string.

There are no really interesting games on the list for Sunday except perhaps that between the Fusiliers and the R.A. for First League points. This game will be the Fusiliers first match since their arrival in the Colony last month and judging from the reputation they bring with them they should not have much of a task against the Gunners who are not very strong this year. In the only other Premier League encounter the Lincoln should be able to easily account for the Saints.

The Racket that swept the board at Wimbledon!

By the Clubman

THE Great White Racket Battle of Wimbledon is solved at last. I can give you the solution to-day.

Everyone has been noticing and asking the why and wherefore of the gleaming white-bound racket favoured by the British headed players and certain others of the stars.

I have heard it quite seriously suggested that the all-gleaming white binding is a new device for keeping the racket waterproof.

Another, rather more facetious, suggestion was that the racket had been bandaged to keep the throat of it from contracting the current complaint—Wimbledon throat.

Actually the racket is the very latest thing in tennis implements—a masterpiece of the craftsman's art.

The white effect is produced by a special solution covering all the bindings and extending down to the grip of the handle.

It adds that extra fraction of strength and "finish" to the racket which attracts the choice of the stars, ever on the look-out for something to add just a bit more to their game.

The making of the new "white hope" among rackets is a much more difficult job than the ordinary kind, I am told.

The weight of the solution—hardly noticeable to the novice but a vital thing to the crack player—has to be allowed for from the first stages, as once applied it cannot be altered.

The slightest error in "The Slazenger" and the racket is "waste."

SERIAL STORY

The Clue Of The Forgotten Murder:

By CARLETON KENDRAKE

CHAPTER XXVIII

Bleeker eyed the revolver distastefully. "What's the idea?" he demanded. "Put it in your pocket," Griff repeated. "But why?" "We're going to call on Mr. Kenneth Boone. The party may get rough." "Look here," Bleeker protested, "aren't you going rather far in this thing without notifying the police?" "We're going a lot farther," Griff told him. "This is one of the cases that the police would fall down on. They'd give out a lot of newspaper publicity and get the thing all tangled up. They'd wind up by convicting an innocent person and letting the guilty escape."

"What case are you talking about?" Decker asked. "This murder case?" "About the murder of the newspaper reporter," Griff said. "And we're about the death of a man named Frank B. Cathay."

"Don't you think Cathay committed suicide?" asked Bleeker. "Are you contending that he didn't, in view of the statements of the doctors who conducted the post-mortem?"

Griff opened a box of cartridges, slipped some extra ones into his pocket and said, "I'll admit this much. He took the poison voluntarily."

"You're going to leave me here?" Decker asked.

"Down in the vestibule," Griff told him. "You're going to wait until the newspaper reporters come and then you're going to tell your story and tell the whole story just as it actually happened."

Decker's face showed relief as he remarked, "Good, what a load this is off my mind! Why didn't you show me Lampson's picture sooner, Griff?"

"Because I thought it was Lampson until about an hour ago. I thought he must have done the killing."

"How did you find out it wasn't Lampson?"

"I just happened to think things over and decided I'd better check up by showing you Lampson's picture. Remember now, Decker, when the newspaper reporters interview you, you aren't telling them where you were hiding during the time the police were looking for you. You're not going to tell anyone that. And, incidentally, the police are going to think that Lampson's men bribed you."

"I don't give a damn what the police think. I'm telling the truth," Decker rejoined.

"Okay," Griff said. "Let's go, Bleeker."

Griff located two men from the detective agency seated in automobiles in front of the Trent Apartments.

"Are they in?" he asked, when he had identified himself.

"Both of them," he said. "That's the apartment up there. You can see the window, with the curtains pulled down."

"We're going up," Griff told him. "If you hear a racket, come on up. Griff led the way to the apartment, pushed his finger on the buzzer. There was no answer. He pounded with his knuckles on the door. Still no answer."

"Open up!" Griff shouted. "We know you're in there, Boone. Open that door!"

This time there sounded the rustle of surreptitious motion from behind the door.

Griff stepped to one side. Bleeker pulled his gun from his pocket, stared grimly at the door. Griff motioned the publisher to keep the gun out of sight. There was the sound of a falling chain, the click of a catch. The door opened and a man of about 30 stood staring at them in hostile appraisal.

Griff swept his eyes over the dark skin of the face, the snapping black eyes, the coarse black hair which came low on the forehead, the bushy black eyebrows.

"Boone?" he asked.

"Yes," said the man in surly tones. "Who are you?"

"Down in the vestibule," Griff told him. "You're going to wait until the newspaper reporters come and then you're going to tell your story and tell the whole story just as it actually happened."

"Open up!" Griff shouted. "We know you're in there, Boone. Open that door!"

This time there sounded the rustle of surreptitious motion from behind the door.

Griff stepped to one side. Bleeker pulled his gun from his pocket, stared grimly at the door. Griff motioned the publisher to keep the gun out of sight. There was the sound of a falling chain, the click of a catch. The door opened and a man of about 30 stood staring at them in hostile appraisal.

Griff swept his eyes over the dark skin of the face, the snapping black eyes, the coarse black hair which came low on the forehead, the bushy black eyebrows.

"Boone?" he asked.

"Yes," said the man in surly tones. "Who are you?"

"Down in the vestibule," Griff told him. "You're going to wait until the newspaper reporters come and then you're going to tell your story and tell the whole story just as it actually happened."

Decker's face showed relief as he remarked, "Good, what a load this is off my mind! Why didn't you show me Lampson's picture sooner, Griff?"

"Because I thought it was Lampson until about an hour ago. I thought he must have done the killing."

"How did you find out it wasn't Lampson?"

"I just happened to think things over and decided I'd better check up by showing you Lampson's picture. Remember now, Decker, when the newspaper reporters interview you, you aren't telling them where you were hiding during the time the police were looking for you. You're not going to tell anyone that. And, incidentally, the police are going to think that Lampson's men bribed you."

"I don't give a damn what the police think. I'm telling the truth," Decker rejoined.

"Okay," Griff said. "Let's go, Bleeker."

"No."

"When was the last time you saw Alice Lorion?"

"I don't know—a couple of weeks ago, maybe. She and I had a little argument."

"You knew where she lived?"

"Yes."

"Over in the Elite Apartments?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever meet Esther Ordway?"

"I've seen her a couple of times, but that's all. She wouldn't stay in the apartment when Alice had company coming. I met her in the hallway once or twice and know who she was, but we never spoke. I don't think she knew who I was."

"How did you know who she was?"

"I saw her coming out of the apartment once."

"That's the only way you knew who she was?"

"Yes."

"Would you recognize her if you saw her again?"

"Yes."

Boone settled in his chair and sighed. He seemed much more certain of himself now.

"You know a man named Morden—a newspaper reporter?" Griff asked.

"You mean the man who was murdered? The one whose picture was in the papers?"

"Yes."

"No, I never saw him."

Griff exchanged glances with Bleeker.

"Get ready, Bleeker

NEW BUILDINGS ORDINANCE

LOCAL LAWS BEING CONSOLIDATED

The Gazette contains the draft of an Ordinance to amend and consolidate the law relating to the construction of buildings.

It is explained that one of the recommendations in the report of the Director of Medical and Sanitary Services on the need for reorganization of the Medical and Sanitary Services is that regulations regarding the construction of buildings should come under a Buildings Ordinance. Hitherto this subject has been dealt with under the Public Health and Buildings Ordinance (No. 1 of 1903).

It is felt that there are disadvantages in mixing provisions as to the design and construction of buildings, which concern mainly the Public Works Department, with provisions relating to house-cleaning and the prevention of disease, which are the special concern of the Sanitary and Medical Departments.

This Ordinance extracts from Ordinance No. 1 of 1903 (which it is intended shortly to repeal and replace by another Ordinance or Ordinances dealing with Sanitation and the Prevention of Disease) those provisions which deal with the construction of buildings and concern the Public Works Department and amends them where amendment is considered necessary.

DEATH OF MRS. DAVID GOW

PASSES AWAY IN SCOTLAND

Many residents of the Colony will learn with deep regret of the death, which occurred at Broughty Ferry, Scotland, yesterday afternoon, of Mrs. Gow, wife of Mr.
David Gow, formerly of the Hongkong and Whampoa Dock
Co., Ltd. News of the sad event was received by cable this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Gow left the Colony on the former's retirement in February of this year, settling down in Scotland. For some time prior to her departure for home,
Mrs. Gow had been in ill-health, and was for a time patient at the War Memorial Hospital. She had been more or less under medical treatment ever since.

The late Mrs. Gow came out to Shanghai in 1922 with Mrs. Gordon Mackie and stayed there for a year, after which she returned to Scotland. Later, she came out to Hongkong and in 1925 was married to Mr. Gow. She took a great interest in the Kowloon Union Church and Sunday School, and particularly in the Women's Guild, of which she was Hon. Secretary.

The deceased lady was Mr.
Gow's second wife, and there is one daughter by the marriage, Flora. By the first marriage there was also a daughter, Margaret. Besides husband and daughter, Mrs. Gow leaves a sister and a brother, with all of whom much sympathy will be felt.

During her residence in the Colony, Mrs. Gow made numerous friends and was highly esteemed by all who knew her.

The Government is inviting tenders for the reconstruction of Sheung Shui Railway Station building.

Opportunity is being taken of holding routine exercises on December 12 so that all the above ships can take part.

Sailors will endeavour to effect a landing at the port, which the Army, acting in co-operation with the air force, will attempt to repulse.

It is emphasised that the manoeuvres are not a test of Singapore's defences, but are purely of a routine nature.

NEW STORM CODE SIGNALS

COMING INTO FORCE IN JANUARY

The current issue of the Government Gazette gives details of a revised local Storm Signal Code which is shortly to come into operation.

The new signals, which do not greatly differ from those at present in force, are the result of decisions reached at the Meteorological Conference held at Manila early this year.

The principal changes are in respect of Signals Nos. 7 and 8.
The old No. 7 (drum) now becomes a double cone pointed upwards, and the old No. 8 (ball) becomes a double cone pointed downwards.
This change has been made because the new signals will now possess international significance.

Signals Nos. 5, 6, 7 and 8 in the new Code are now all international in character.

force in Hongkong on January 1,

EAST POINT FIRE

SMALL OUTBREAK QUELLED

The setting alight of medicinal herbs being dried over a stove in the kitchen in the rear of the first floor is thought to have caused a fire which broke out shortly after 4.45 this morning at 48 Jardine's Bazaar, East Point.

The outbreak was extinguished by the Fire Brigade within a very short time of their reaching the spot, and the little damage suffered is assessed at less than $750, in addition to the medicine dealer's loss in goods.

The two-storey building in which the fire occurred is covered by insurance to the extent of $3,000.
